Mr. Deshmukh and the other teachers did not force the students to read all this. They waited. They chatted with the students about what was written and where. They discussed what games they could play using the writing. And they waited. One day, Vishal came to see Mr. Deshmukh. He and his friends had found that all the information on the walls was actually there in their textbooks! We can show you where each bit comes from, "he said.

Mr. Deshmukh was very happy. Finally, the children had begun to read. He knew that, of course. Because even their homework was beginning to look better.

The Sarpanch was pleased, too he said, "No just the children, even the grown-ups have begun to read all the time. Mr. Deshmukh has taken the whole village to school.
